DORT The Dole Inn

... many parts, like the most part of Venice, the houses appear tumbling, as much inclining forward from perpendicular as the leaning tower at Pisa, at least the old houses.

It is all windows, very little wall, those windows remarkably neat and clean; the panes are smaller than ours the glass is better, like ground glass, fifty or eighty in one window, each upwards of a foot square.

The Cathedral stuck full of at least a thousand, which gives a melancholy air, like a room where a corpse is lying in state.
